

Gelato

This denser and smoother cousin of ice-cream was a delight! Especially in the sweltering heat. With ‘Gelaterias’ every 500m, and their irresistible texture and flavours, every other person we passed had a cup or a cone in their hands.

We tried a most interesting flavour, Basil and White Chocolate with Hazelnut. It was quite fascinating that the gelaterias insist on having at least 2 flavours of gelato, even in their smallest cups.

Drinks and Dessert

The only dolci (dessert) we had in Rome was a tiramisu. A small sacrifice to make space for the creamy gelatos.

The ‘Coffee-culture’ was quite fascinating. Most places we went to had very fancy looking coffee machines, and the coffee was most excellent!

A cool glass of Aperol Spritz was as popular as gelato. And rightfully so. The bitter sweet intoxicating taste pairs really well with the food too!
